

Mr. Clay's Address.
In our last number we gave the address of Col. Polk, President elect of the U. S. Below we give the address of Mr. Clay, made to the Kentucky Electors, who visited him at Ashland. We think it proper for us to give his remarks to our readers for the obvious reason of showing them that Mr. Clay is not altogether so bitter as his friends:

"I am greatly obliged, gentlemen, by the kindness towards me, which has prompted this visit from the Governor, the Presidential Electors of Kentucky, and some of my fellow citizens, in private life. And I thank you sir (Mr Underwood) their organ, on this occasion, for the feeling and eloquent address which you have just done me the honor to deliver. I am under the greatest obligations to the people of Kentucky. During more than forty years of my life, they have demonstrated their confidence and affection towards me, in every variety of form. This last and crowning evidence of their long and faithful attachment, exhibited in the vote which, in their behalf, you gave yesterday, at the Seat of the State Government, as the Electoral College of Kentucky, fills me with overflowing gratitude. But I should fail to express the feelings of my heart, if I did not also offer my profound and grateful acknowledgments to the other States, which have united with Kentucky in the endeavor to elect me to the Chief Magistracy of the Union, and to the million and a quarter of freemen, embracing so much virtue, intelligence and patriotism, who, wherever residing, have directed strenuous and enthusiastic exertions to the same object.

Their effort has been unavailing, and the issue of the election has not corresponded with their anxious hopes and confident expectations. You have, sir, assigned some of the causes which you suppose have occasioned the result. I will not trust myself to speak of them. My duty is that of perfect submission to an event, which is now irrevocable.

I will not affect indifference to the personal concern which I had in the political contest just terminated; but unless I am greatly self-deceived, the principal attraction to me of the office of President of the United States, arose out of the cherished hope that I might be on a humble instrument in the hands of Providence, to accomplish public good. I desire to see the former purity of the general government restored and to see dangers and evils, which I sincerely believe encompassed it, averted and remedied. I was anxious that the policy of the country, especially in the great department of its domestic labor and industry should be fixed and stable, that all might know how to regulate and accommodate their conduct. And, fully convinced of the wisdom of the public measures which you have enumerated, I hoped to live to witness, and to contribute to their adoption and establishment.

So far as respects any official agency of mine, it has been otherwise decreed, and I bow respectfully to the decree. The future course of the government is altogether unknown, and wraps in painful uncertainty. I shall not do the new Administration the injustice of condemning it in advance. On the contrary, I earnestly desire that, enlightened by its own reflections, and by a deliberate review of all the great interests of the country, or promoted by public opinion, the benefit may be yet secured of the practical execution of those principles & measures for which we have honestly contended, that peace and honor may be preserved, and that this young but great nation may be rendered harmonious, prosperous and powerful.

We are not without consolations under the event which has happened. The whig party has fully and fairly exhibited to the country the principles and measures which it believed best adapted to secure our liberties and promote the common welfare. It has made, in their support constant and urgent appeals to the reason and judgment of the people. For myself, I have the high satisfaction to know that I have escaped a great and fearful responsibility; and that, during the whole canvass, I have done nothing inconsistent with the dictates of the purest honor. No mortal man is authorized to say that I held out to him the promise of any office or appointment whatever.

What now is the duty of the whig party? I venture to express my opinion with the greatest diffidence. The future is enveloped in a veil impenetrable by human eyes. I cannot contemplate it, without feelings of great discouragement. But I know of only one safe rule, in all the vicissitudes of human life, public and private, and that is conscientiously to satisfy ourselves of what is right, and firmly and undeviatingly to pursue it under all trials and circumstances, confiding in the great Ruler of the Universe for ultimate success. The Whigs are deliberately convinced of the truth and wisdom of the principles and measures which they have espoused. It seems, therefore, to me that they should persevere in contending for them; and that, adhering to their separate and distinct organization, they should treat all who have the good of their country in view with respect and sympathy, and invite their co-operation in securing the patriotic objects which it has been their aim and purpose to accomplish.

I heartily thank you, Sir, for your friendly wishes for my happiness, in the retirement, which henceforward best becomes me. Here I hope to enjoy peace and tranquility, seeking faithfully to perform, on the walks of private life, whatever duties may yet appertain to me. And I shall never cease, whilst life remains, to look, with lively interest and deep solicitude, upon the movement and operations of our free system of Government, and to hope that, under the smiles of an all-wise Providence the Republic may ever be just, honorable, prosperous and great.

The Annual Treasury Report.
[Below we give a synopsis of the annual Report of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. Our limits will not admit of the publication of the Report in full. The synopsis embraces all the essential parts of it:—]

The Revenue for the fiscal year ending on the 30th day of June last, was $30,381,700 03; received from the following sources, viz:
From customs, $26,183,670 94
From the public lands, 2,049,939 80
Miscellaneous sources, 261,007 94
Treasury notes and loans under act of March 3, 1813, 1,877,181 35

Making an aggregate of 30,381,700 03
The Expenditures during the same period, including $12,998,773 54 on account of the public debt were 32,958,827 94

Exceeding the year's receipts by $2,577,127 91
This latter amount, deducted from the sum remaining in the Treasury, July 1, 1813, of 10,434,507 55

Left a balance on hand July 1, 1814, of $7,857,379 64

The Estimated Receipts for the present fiscal year, which will end on the 30th of June, 1815, are as follows:
From the customs, $31,945,018 04
From the public lands, 2,139,856 89
From other sources, 120,000 00

Making a total of 31,204,874 93
And the Estimated Expenditures and other demands on the Treasury within the same time, amount to 35,019,431 06

Being less than the estimated receipts by $14,556 13
Which deducted from the balance reported on hand the 1st of July last, as above stated, 7,857,379 64
Would leave in the Treasury on the 1st of July, 1815, an apparent balance of $7,042,823 51

The above apparent balance, however, is liable to be decreased by the amount of any additional appropriations that may be made during the present Session of Congress, to be expended previous to the 30th day of June next.

The Existing Debt of the United States on the 1st of July last, was $24,748,186 33. On the 1st of December preceding it was $23,850,673 03. The Secretary recommends that a sinking fund of two millions of dollars annually be provided to pay the interest on this debt, and to redeem the principal at the respective periods assigned for its redemption.

The Imports during the fiscal year ending on the 30th of June, 1814, are valued as follows:
Free of duty, $24,766,083 00
Paying duty, $3,688,620 00
Total imports, $108,454,802 00

The Exports for the same time were:
Of domestic products, $100,183,577 00
Of foreign merchandise, 10,944,781 00
Total exports, $111,128,358 00

The Gross Revenue from customs within the year, was $20,137,060 60, and the net amount paid into the Treasury, was $26,183,570 94; making the cost of collection $2,953,589 60.

In regard to the PRESENT TARIFF, the Secretary "most respectfully recommends to Congress a review and reformation of the act of 1812 to provide revenue from imports." "Weighty considerations," he says, "concur in pleading for such review and reform." These considerations are mentioned, but we have not had time to read them.—One of the objections urged against the existing law which met our eye in hastily turning over the Report, is that it is stated by the Secretary to be its "lack of perspicuity and exact definitions in some of the enactments" which "give rise to different constructions by different collectors of the customs, so that practically and in fact different rates of duties on like articles have been levied at different ports in the States," contrary to that clause of the Constitution which provides that all duties shall be uniform throughout the Union. He also objects to certain parts of the act of 1812, because, by its providing in general terms that its provisions shall not be so construed as to conflict with subsisting treaties with foreign nations, it occasions much trouble and responsibility to Collectors, and is the cause of many complaints to the Treasury Department. As respects a general welfare, the Secretary thinks that so long as Congress shall keep within the "confinement" of raising that which is "necessary," the encouragement thereby afforded to domestic industry "must be deemed rightful as an inevitable attendant upon the exercise of the delegated power;" and in concluding his remarks on the subject of the tariff, he states that the proposed review and modification of the act of 1812 are presented not so much with a view to the action of Congress during its present session, as to awaken attention and inquiry, and lead the way towards eliciting all the information necessary for such matured legislation as the important principles and interests involved seem to require.

There may be, and no doubt is, much other interesting matter in this Report which has escaped our notice on the hasty glance we have given it, and which will render it necessary for us to advert again to its contents.

POSTSCRIPT.
As we go to press, the mail from Raleigh arrives—nothing of importance, however, to note. Members of the Legislature have got Christmas in their heads, and some who senators went home to kiss their wives and children, and make them presents on Christmas day. The Register of the 24th says in a Postscript, that the senate were engaged nearly the whole of the morning session of yesterday, in considering a motion of Mr. Biggs, of Martin, to amend the Journal of the senate, by striking out all that portion of it (except the Resolutions of expulsion) which relates to its action on the case of the senator from Onslow, and inserting in lieu thereof, the concluding remarks of Mr. Henry, one of the Counsel for Mr. Ennett. A division of the question being called for, the first question was on striking out, which was carried.
